G-Star Raw

Founded in 1989, G-Star Raw creates “luxury denim for the streets.” The brand utilizes top-notch craftsmanship to create streetwear for an edgy everyday style. Its “most sustainable jeans ever” boast 100% organic cotton, buttons without toxic chemicals, 98% recyclable material and more, and G-Star builds sustainability inherently into the company’s mission. They boast a philosophy centered around “Hardcore Denim,” demonstrating their dedication to pioneering the styling and use of denim and changing industry standards. “If we still want to be here as a denim brand in 20, 50 or even 100 years from now,” G-Star states, “it is crucial for us to think innovatively about the impact we have on people and the planet.” The company is transparent about its efforts to increase sustainable production and reduce its carbon footprint, aiming to decrease emissions from buildings while upholding the quality of its product. It has also established the GSRD Foundation to support the lives of people in countries where G-Star produces. Alongside its global partners, the brand provides education and stimulates entrepreneurship through vocational and life skills training for young people. Herschel Supply Co.

Founded in 2009 by Lyndon and Jamie Cormack in Vancouver, Canada, Herschel Supply Co. continues to make quality and well-designed backpacks and accessories. Herschel Supply Co. initially got its name from Hersche, Saskatchewan, where earlier generations of the family grew up. This small town embodied the boundless creative freedom which the brand remains inspired by. Ever since, the brand has been inspired to make a positive environmental impact, protecting the surrounding mountains, oceans and community. In 2021, they created a 10 Year Vision, with many sustainability goals accomplished by the following year. The company achieved 100% renewable electricity, recycled 4 million plastic bottles into backpacks, and donated $215,000 to support North American creatives. Their plan also contains future goals, including reducing emissions by 42% by the year 2030.

By launching their “Eco Collection” in 2021, Herschel began to feature products made out of 100% recycled materials—from label to liner. This collection now contains various sustainable products, made with the EcoSystem materials. In fact, by the Fall 2023, over 90% of Herschel’s products will be made with EcoSystem recycled materials. This fabric is made from 100% recycled post-consumer water bottles made with 70% recycled polycarbonate from post-use road barricade material. Going forward, Herschel plans to continue investing in their sustainability initiatives. To learn more, click here.

Baggu

Founded in 2007, Baggu was inspired by a desire for a reusable bag that was both functional and fashionable. Since creating the first Standard Baggu, the company has expanded to design many different types of bags in its San Francisco studio — all sustainably made. Baggu has long had a partnership with its factory in China, ensuring the company's familiarity with the ethical and environmental responsibility upheld in the creation of its bags. Their entire Ripstop Nylon collection is made with 40% recycled material — specifically, recycled nylon filament yarn produced from pre- and post-consumer waste. The company thus uses less scrap material, which conserves petroleum and reduces greenhouse gas emissions. In addition, they have redesigned its packaging to eliminate plastic hang-tags and introduce recyclable paper sleeves, paper hang-tags, packing slips and biodegradable poly bags. Baggu has reinvented the plastic bag with similarly lightweight totes that hold more weight and have less of a carbon footprint.
